

Doctor of Christian Counseling

Upon completion of the Doctor of Christian Counseling, the graduate should be able to:

1. Apply ministerial counseling to individuals, couples, families, and group ministries.
2. Demonstrate, through practical experiences the ability to provide Christian mental health services to individuals, the church, and the community overall.
3. Apply an understanding of Scripture along with the knowledge and techniques of the behavioral sciences to assist future clients.
4. Use critical thinking effectively and explain different research methods and statistical analyses utilized by counselors.
5. Demonstrate effective oral communication and writing skills in various presentations and for various objectives.
6. Formulate data collection, interpretation, and reporting of research gathered from standardized tests.
7. Prepare to pursue a professional career focusing on the chosen specialization, to operate within a church counseling center or Christian-based counseling services.

The Doctor of Christian Counseling program is designed for counselors, social workers, educators, and pastors who seek to advance their knowledge and practical proficiency in biblical counseling. This program also aims to sharpen the skillsets of those who have been actively engaged in some form of professional ministry (whether through social services, parish, chaplaincy, or community outreach, etc.) and who meet the admission requirements listed for this degree. The degree is also offered to credentialed ministry professionals. Overall, the attainment of a Doctor of Christian Counseling degree prepares each student to adhere to issues of faith and spirituality while addressing the mental health needs of a person.

Prerequisites: The Doctor of Christian Counseling requires a Master's degree in Christian Counseling, Psychology, Counseling, Pastoral Counseling, or Social Work.
